FAQS

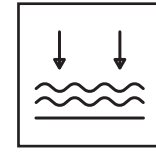

Reasons for air bubble formations on Acrylic Sheets

Acrylic are bonded in extremely humid conditions

Insufficient or lack of pressing during the bonding period of laminate

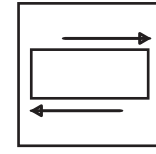

Debonding in certain areas because of uneven substrate surface

When substrate loses moisture after installation

Use of water base synthetic resin adhesive any other than PEVA (Polyethylene Vinyl Acetate Co-polymer)

Use of extremely large acrylic/PVC laminate sheets

To avoid delamination / air bubbles in between ply and laminate the above steps should be taken care of. Bonding of acrylic sheets shouldn't be completed under high humidity
